Monthly Fund Manager's comment

The S&P 500 continued to rally in August, but leadership looked a lot different than prior months. Several rate-sensitive areas performed well heading into a likely rate cut in September, including Household Durables, Automobiles, and Banks. The index closed the overall monthly performance with a +2%, in a context of low volatility and visible sector rotation. Investor sentiment remained constructive despite mixed macro signals: while manufacturing activity showed signs of slowing, consumer spending proved resilient, and inflation stayed close to the Fed's target. Markets continued to price a stable monetary policy path, with expectations for unchanged rates through year-end.

At the sector level, performance was led by Materials (+5.6%) and Health Care (+5.3%), both supported by the search for quality and defensive exposure. Communication Services (+3.8%) and Consumer Discretionary (+3.3%) also delivered strong returns, helped by ongoing consumer strength. On the downside, Technology (+0.3%) lagged after months of strong leadership, while Industrials (-0.2%) and especially Utilities (-2.0%) underperformed, pressured by higher real yields and reduced demand for defensive "bond proxy" sectors.

During August, we increased our exposure to Communication Services (EA, TTWO) and reduced the OW on staples (COST, WMRT). The portfolio in August had almost no change in positioning compared to the previous month. The fund performed in line with the benchmark in August. In August, market leadership rotated away from Technology, with Materials and Health Care emerging as top performers while rate-sensitive sectors such as Utilities and Industrials lagged. Growth stocks no longer clearly outpaced value, reflecting a broader but still fragile market breadth. Large-cap quality names continue to anchor index performance, though the leadership is less concentrated than in prior months. As the Goldilocks narrative remains intact, we stay disciplined and selective, focusing on companies with resilient fundamentals and earnings visibility.
